

This week we focus on Iran where five days of national mourning have been declared after President Ebrahim Raisi, Foreign Minister Hossein Amirabdollahian and other officials were killed in a helicopter crash.

Separately, one person has died and dozens were injured after a Singapore Airlines flight heading from London to Singapore was hit by severe turbulence.

Finally, examine how artificial intelligence-powered bots have emerged as an unexpected weapon in Israel's war on Gaza.

What comes next for Iran after the death of President Raisi?

Country to hold election next month but no major policy changes expected.

One dead as Singapore Airlines flight from London hit by severe turbulence

Flight fell into an air pocket while cabin crew were serving breakfast, prompting the pilots to request an emergency landing in Bangkok.

Are you chatting with a pro-Israeli AI-powered superbot?

As Israeli attacks continue to pummel Gaza, a parallel battle rages on social media between people and bots.

World reacts to ICC prosecutor seeking Israel, Hamas arrest warrants

The global court's chief prosecutor says he is seeking arrest warrants for top Israeli and Hamas leaders.

Gaza war: What does victory look like for the US and Israel?

After more than seven months of war, analysts say Israel's aims may be to destroy Gaza and displace its population.

PODCAST: Hush money, a gag order, and protests: the Trump-Stormy Daniels trial

Former US president remains on trial in New York, despite leading most national polls for this year's election.

ALJAZEERA

Your News, Your Way

Sign up for a free account and join our global community!

Sign Up Now

Follow Al Jazeera English on:

